BONES

Your bones form a framework for your body called a skeleton. If you did not have a skeleton your body would flop all over the place. Bones also protect your internal organs (such as your heart) and work with muscles to make you move.

FAST FACTS

-  There are 206 bones in the human body.
-  Compared to a steel bar of the same weight, bone is six times stronger.
-  You need calcium in your diet to make your bones hard.
-  You have the same number of neck bones as a giraffe: seven.
-  More than a quarter of your bones are in your hands.
-  About eighty bones make up the human skull, backbone and ribs.
-  The thigh bone (femur) is the longest bone in your body. It is about a quarter of your height.
